Powdermill
Nature
Reserve

We had the pleasure of having Dr. Rose-Marie Musika as our presenting speaker today. She is the senior scientist at

Powdermill Nature Reserve, located in Rector, PA. It was established in 1956 as the field station for research for the Carnegie Museum of Natural History. The Mellon and Scaife Families donated 1,160 acres of land to help get this established. It now offers more than 2,200 acres of woodlands, streams, fields, and ponds for research. The Powdermill was once only available to scientists but has opened to the general public. They offer various tours, workshops, field trips, hiking trails, and more. Consider visiting this lovely gem located “in our backyard.”
